Important pledges were made at COP26 to end deforestation, phase out coal, cut methane emissions, increase climate financing and more. Sticking points in international agreements, notably Article 6 and the issue of double-counting carbon credits traded across borders, were also resolved.

However, beyond pledges and commitments, we also need to accelerate real actions now to achieve net zero by 2050. Keeping global warming to 1.5oC will help us avoid the worst effects of climate change, but the window is narrowing. With economies recovering and global growth picking up, we need to decouple economic growth from emissions - and fast.

Themed “Accelerating Action at Scale”, Ecosperity Week 2022 will gather global business leaders, policymakers, investors and civil society from Asia and beyond to deep-dive into real solutions and key levers to accelerate the energy revolution, decarbonise transport and heavy industries, and finance Asia’s green transition.

Sustainability: The Business Imperative for a Brighter Future

No region feels the consequences of climate change as much as Asia – Pacific. In the aftermath of mass disruption to global supply chains and economies, it has become clear that decisive action in the region is vital to counter the impacts of climate change. A complicated maze of regulations and with financial survival of a much higher priority, the shift towards sustainable business practices isn’t straight forward. Amidst a vast array of options, leaders must figure out what is the right sustainable development opportunity for their business.

At Responsible Business Asia 2022, we will help you achieve internal alignment on sustainability starting from proving the business case and achieving internal alignment on your ESG goals, to helping you deliver a resilient supply chain, while navigating the regulatory landscape and ensuring strong stakeholder engagement.

Join 2000+ CEOs and senior-level executives from business, finance and government to build the networks, collaborations and learning that will make 2022 the decisive year, in the decisive decade.
