

Whisky or Uisge Beatha

During the 11th century the only people keeping records of any description were the monastic communities, therefore written records on the subject of whisky are scarce. History was passed down by the word of mouth, so it is difficult to substantiate exactly when distilling started in Scotland or Ireland.

Many stories exist but at Bushmills Distillery, it is believed that spirits were produced as early as 1276 in the County of Antrim in Northern Ireland.

In 1527, the first English translation of a book on the art of distillation was published. "Hieronymus Braunschweig" The vertuose book of distillation. It was only in 1638 that a company of distillers was founded in London to control the trade on distilled spirits.

Whisky is made from grain, which is soaked in warm water. Yeast needs to be added to start the fermentation and after approximately 36 hours the mash is ready to be distilled in a copper still. Every country uses a different grain: Scotland use barley and for its single malts they use germinated barley (malted barley). Ireland uses barley, Canada mainly uses rye and America will use corn, rye and barley. For Bourbon at least 51% corn is used.

The age of whisky is determined by the number of years it is matured in a cask. The spirit will not age while it is in a bottle. A blended whisky will have the age of the youngest spirit in the mixture. Often private bottlers (Gordon & Macphail, Douglas Laing & Co.) will use a millesime (like wine), but must specify on the label the number of years that the aqua vitae has rested in the barrel.

There are no rules on how to enjoy a whisky. Some may have it on the rocks, some with soda water, but most of the experts will recommend a "wee drop" of still water. It will help to develop the flavour of the whisky.

There is no such thing as the "best" whisky. Every palate is different. The age of the whisky will help classify your personal ideas, on which is the most suitable for the moment. Usually the older they get, the smoother they will be.

Different Styles of Whisky

SINGLE MALT

Single malt is distilled at an individual distillery and produced only from malted barley. Single malts may include whisky from several years' production, as long as it is from the same distillery. The age shown on the bottle reflects the length of time the youngest whisky included in the bottling has matured in an oak cask.

BLENDED MALT

Vatted, or Blended malts, are produced by combining various malt whiskies from several distilleries. Vatted or Blended malts often reflect the distilleries from a particular region, such as Johnnie Walker 15 years (Green Label) and these are labeled Pure malt. They therefore cannot be described as Single malt.

GRAIN WHISKY

Grain whisky is produced using continuous distillation process. Malted and un-malted cereals, which are cooked under steam pressure, are used and the resulting spirit is of a higher strength and therefore matures faster than a malt whisky.

BLENDED WHISKY

Blended whisky is created from both Single malts and Grain whisky. Blended whiskies are the perfect introduction to drinking whisky.

DELUXE BLEND

Deluxe blends contain a higher percentage of malt whiskies and often show an age on the label. As with Single malts, this age reflects the youngest whisky in the blend.

CASK STRENGTH

Whisky sold at the strength taken from the cask, normally contains between 57% - 60% alcohol per volume.

SINGLE CASK

Single cask is a whisky from one cask or barrel. At Bascule Bar you are privileged to try some of the rarest Single malts from our private collection, which are usually bought from private collectors or purchased at auctions. They are rare not only because of their age and refinement, but also because some of the distilleries no longer operate. Some of these include Cask strengths and others may have spent a few decades in a cask.

For further information do not hesitate to ask any one of us in Bascule.

LOWLANDS

Lowlands Region

The Lowlands region, which is situated below an imaginary line linking the Clyde and Tay River, which produces whisky in large industrial stills, which are more than often lighter and releases less intense flavours than the Highlands. The few distilleries that are left produce malts, which are lighter and less smoky. Usually enjoyed as an aperitif.

Description: light, soft spiciness, lemon grass and overall 'oaky' dryness.

Auchentoshan

12 YEAR

80

Toffee with tangerine and lime.

AMERICAN OAK

70

Refreshingly smooth yet lively with vanilla cream and coconut.

THREE WOOD

85

Hazelnut with lemon and butterscotch.

Highlands Region

This region stretches from Pulteney in the northeast, to Oban in the west and to Tullibardine in the south. Each whisky is different from its neighbours and the different characteristics are owed to the topography and water supply. Highland distillers often experiment by maturing their malt whisky in different barrels that have been used to first age sherry or port wines. They are usually well balanced and pick up intensity with age.

Description: firm, malty sweetness, slightly oily, light peat and overall smoothness.

Balblair

1989 215

Raisins and fruit with rich spiciness.

1990 225

Toffee and vanilla with a subtle spiced honey finish.

2000 80

Sweet honey and floral notes, hints of coconut and rich spices.

2003 97

Citrus fruits, apricots and honey.

Smoky with hints of fruit and sea air, vanilla and oak wood shavings, light spices. Malty flavours.

NORTHLAND 85

Raisins, currants, more mixed nuts and fresh barley.

PX CASK 150

Fruity, creamy and intense with rum-soaked raisins, red grape, blood orange accompanied by spices such as allspice, ginger and hazelnut.

375 150

At first sweet and creamy, then soft bourbon notes begin to shine through. Oak and vanilla subside to become autumn fruits, gooseberries and maple syrup.

Speyside Region

Speyside is a region situated within the Highlands. With the abundant supplies of water, barley and peat, this region is ideal for distilling whisky. Nearly half of Scottish whiskies are produced in the Speyside. The finishing taste is often spicy and complex. The barley is malted with very little peat therefore the whisky has little smoky flavours and aromas.

Description: medium body, spicy and overall smoothness.

JOURNEY 60

Journey is the entry level expression from the Isle of Jura range. It was aged exclusively in American white oak ex-bourbon barrels. A tasty introduction to Jura's single malts. Melted butter, sugared almond, a very light hint of smoke.

PROPHECY 155

Slightly sweet with fruity notes finishing with a dry smoke coating.

SEVEN WOOD 100

Isle of Jura Seven Wood is made with whisky drawn from seven different types of cask. There's American white oak, and six other French oaks. Nutmeg, strawberry jam on toast, Brazil nuts.

SUPERSTITION 110

Spicy flavour which opens up to lightly sweet.

10 YEAR NEW EXPRESSION 70

It's initially aged in American white oak bourbon barrels before enjoying a finishing period in Oloroso sherry butts. It has the subtle smoke characteristic of Jura's excellent Island single malts. Honeyed barley and peaches in syrup, with light wafts of fragrant wood smoke.

10 YEAR 90

Oak with hints of honey, caramel and soft liquorice.

16 YEAR 165

Earthy with coriander, orange and buttered scone on the palate and a salty finish.

21 YEAR 280

Maraschino cherries, citrus fruits and soft liquorice.

IRISH

Irish Whiskey

Slightly different to the Scottish process. Barley is dried in closed kilns without smoke so that the final taste is of pure malt. The triple distillation process dates back to the Prohibition where the Irish sought to attract back American drinkers by offering lighter whiskies.

Kentucky Bourbon

Whiskies are produced all over North America due to the large supply of grains. Indiana corn is the main grain used in its production. Produced using a mash of 51%-80% corn, and aged in new, charred white-oak barrels, bourbons display the sweeter style associated with American whiskey. Bourbon has been distilled since the 18th century. The use of the term “bourbon” for the whiskey has been traced to the 1820’s, and the term began to be used consistently in Kentucky in the 1870’s. While bourbon may be made anywhere in the United States, it is strongly associated with the American South, and with Kentucky in particular.
