

Craig Tindall

Craig joined byrne-dean as an associate in 2019. He started his career as a research chemist and moved into management consulting and HR before studying psychology and organisational psychology, specialising in organisational development.

Experience

Research – Craig has expertise in designing quantitative and qualitative research in subject areas including well-being, diversity and inclusion.

Training design and facilitation – Craig extensive experience of designing and facilitating interactive training and simulations.

1:1 work – Craig works 1:1 with people, often with people who are considering career transition.

Team development – Craig works with teams to help improve their collective performance while maintaining their wellbeing.

Community – Craig spends around 25% of his working life volunteering and doing Pro Bono work.

Qualifications

MSc Organisational Psychology

Grad Diploma Psychology

PhD Organic Chemistry

BSc Hons Chemistry

Ability and Personality assessments including NEO-PI3, Hogan, Strengthscope

Fellow of the Center for Evidence-based Practice.