

Streamlining data management to power growth

CLIENT OBJECTIVE

A large, well-established Japanese asset manager needed to redirect internal resources towards higher growth strategies while improving governance and facilitating better investment decision-making

Challenges

- Legacy data estate complex, unstructured and inefficient
- Data feeds sourced both directly from vendors and a third-party distributor, leading to a lack of standardization
- In-house data team spending too much of its time managing data quality issues as well as having to manually manage changes in vendor methodologies
- With multiple data users across the organization, the lack of a centralized data governance structure is suboptimal
- Lack of Japanese speakers and inconsistent client service from its existing data partners

The Rimes solution

- With our local partner, Nomura Research Institute, Ltd. (NRI) we worked closely with our client to fully understand all their technical challenges and communication concerns
- Using our award-winning Benchmark Data Service, we delivered a tailored and scalable benchmark and index feed, in the client's desire file format, into its Enterprise Data Management platform
- We took over the sourcing, validation and quality control of our client's 200+ index feeds from multiple providers, delivering timely, quality data ready for immediate use throughout the organization
- With Rimes taking over its existing operational data processes, our client has been able to redeploy its internal resources, helping to drive growth. We are confident that we can support them as their data needs grow
- By working in partnership with both NRI and our client, we delivered a seamless client service without the language and cultural barriers they had previously experienced
